

Sensory Processing Disorder

What is Sensory Processing Disorder?

Sensory Processing Disorder (SPD) is a condition that is closely associated with autism and affects those on the spectrum in different ways.

Lights, smells, sounds, touch and taste can be overwhelming for those with SPD.

How can you help?

You can help children with Sensory Processing Disorder by providing an area that they can escape to if the main activity areas in your setting become too much.

